IF you see young people trembling in fear as they read their text messages, it may be because they're being intimidated ... by, er, full stops. They are said to view the punctuation mark as a too-blunt way of ending a sentence, leaving them worrying that the sender is insincere or angry. Instead, they apparently prefer no full stop, or are happier with an exclamation mark at the end of a ...

Who's Afraid of the Big "Bad Answer"? To get students to think for themselves as they read, teachers have to stop thinking for them. Maren Aukerman In principle, we know that we should value what students say. But what if a student completely misinterprets the story he or she is reading? A 5th grader I'll call Adam provides a case in point.

Jenny Kleeman's book, Sex Robots & Vegan Meat, makes a refreshing change from the utopia/dystopia dyad. Steak-loving Kleeman is serially disappointed in her quest to taste the lab-grown meat of the future. Sometimes it's a tiny snippet of 'disgusting' mush, sometimes it doesn't exist at all except in the minds of potential investors.
